A Glimpse into the Agri-Plus Program

by Andy Amy Nolt

Greetings from the beautiful part of the world we've been calling home since January of 2025.

During the last eighteen months the village of Asomdwee, our many neighbors, the Fante language, and even the local food has been changing from foreign to familiar...but still we have much to learn! Some of the things we prioritized during our first year were language & culture classes, building relationships with people Andy and his assistant Nathaniel worked in the Agri-Plus farm plots and visited the farms of local farmers as they had opportunity. Most of those things continue to be a part of our daily life along with a few additions. One of those is an experiment of raising about 500 catfish. One of the goals of the Agri-Plus program is to help the Ghanaian farmers diversify their farming efforts to provide a more stable income; we feel fish farming could potentially be a good addition to crop farming. Some other farming related things we've been working at are: raising legumes for cover crops, experimenting with different crops, and finding methods of storage to reduce post harvest losses. Moving forward, we hope to do more with beekeeping and begin Biblical Agriculture teaching sessions in some local villages.

It's our prayer that we can be an effective witness here in spite of challenges such as communication difficulties, the unhealthy poverty mindset of many people, and the underlying traditional beliefs/superstitions which continue to keep people in darkness in spite of the abundance of churches and Christianity around us.

Each one of us has a charge to keep and a God to glorify...let's be faithful in praying for each other as we strive to fulfill our calling in this present age.
